Announcement

This issue of Hume Studies is A. E. Pitson's last as book review editor, a job he assumed with our November 2000 issue. The books Tony selected for review since then—and the writers he found to review them—reflect the range of his interests in Hume and of his sympathies as a philosopher. The editors are grateful to Tony for his creative choices, careful management, and judicious editing. Reviews originally commissioned by Tony will continue to appear in the journal for quite some time.

The editors are delighted to welcome Donald L. M. Baxter, of the University of Connecticut, as Tony's successor. Books for review and all book review correspondence should now be sent to Don, whose address appears on the inside back cover of this issue.
