

Acknowledgments

The editors acknowledge the generous support of Santa Clara University and Wellesley College.

New Editors

The editors warmly welcome their successors, Peter Loftson of the University of Guelph and Peter Millican of Oxford University, whose term begins with the November 2005 issue. Working at their side will be Jacqueline Taylor of the University of San Francisco, as Associate Editor for Moral Philosophy, and Peter Kail of Oxford University, as Book Review Editor.

The outgoing editors are indebted to many people for their help. They include Saul Traiger, for conceiving and directing the journal's electronic archiving; Richard McCarty, for the design and management of our database of authors; Angela Blackburn, for crucial guidance as our work began; William Edward Morris, for his exemplary yearly bibliographies; Mike Karlsson and Corliss Swain of The Hume Society, for numerous forms of assistance; our editorial board and the Executive Committee of The Hume Society, for their thoughtful advice; and George Leaman, Lori Fells, Marty Klaif, and Pamela Swope, all of the Philosophy Documentation Center, for their efficient support of the journal's production and distribution. We are especially grateful to our Book Review Editors, A. E. Pitson (whose contributions were acknowledged in an earlier issue) and Donald L. M. Baxter. Don's wisely chosen and deftly edited reviews will continue to appear in future issues.

Correction

Claudia M. Schmidt's recent book, David Hume: Reason in History, reviewed in our last issue (30 [2004]: 405–7), was published in 2003 by The Pennsylvania State University Press. In the heading of our review, the publisher was mistakenly identified as The University of Pennsylvania Press. The editors regret the error.
