McGILL DAVID HUME COLLECTION RESEARCH GRANT

The Rare Books and Special Collections Division of the McGill University Library has established the McGill David Hume Collection Research Grant. The David Hume Collection held at McGill is the most important collection of Hume materials outside Edinburgh. In addition to fifty manuscript letters by Hume, the collection includes a nearly complete set of the lifetime editions of Hume's works and translations of them. The collection also includes many later eighteenth-century editions of these works, a wide range of the known eighteenth-century commentaries on them, and significant holdings of nineteenth- and twentieth-century editions and commentaries, including many nineteenth- and twentieth-century theses devoted to Hume. The McGill Library also supports Hume scholarship by systematic acquisition of relevant recent publications, particularly those in English, French, German, and Italian.

The McGill David Hume Collection Research Grant, with a value of $5000 (Cdn.), is open to established scholars carrying out research on any aspect of the work of David Hume, philosopher, essayist, and historian. The Grant will provide financial support to assist scholars to spend a minimum of three months utilizing the David Hume Collection and other relevant resources of the Rare Books Division and the McGill libraries. Grantees will be provided an office with a computer and internet access within the Rare Books Division, and ample opportunity to discuss their work with members of the lively academic community encompassing McGill and the three other universities located in Montreal. The deadline for applications for the 2007-8 Grant is November 15, 2006. For further information please visit the Hume Collection website at:
