

Acknowledgments

The editors acknowledge the generous support of the University of Guelph and the University of Oxford, and the editorial assistance of Cherilyn Keall of the University of Guelph. We would also like to acknowledge the assistance of Corina David of the University of Guelph as copy-editor.

Announcement

Hume Studies has published for many years in its November issue a review of The Hume Literature, itemizing publications and doctoral dissertations on Hume that have appeared since the previous review, together with corrections and updates. William Edward Morris, a former co-editor of Hume Studies, was author-editor of this valuable resource for the eleven-year period November 1994–November 2004 inclusive. The editors acknowledge with gratitude the important contribution to Hume scholarship that Ted Morris's bibliographical work during this period has provided. The Hume Literature review and update does not appear in the present issue, but will reappear in Hume Studies from the November 2006 issue. The Hume Literature for the November 2006 issue will be compiled by Professor James Fieser, of the University of Tennessee at Martin. Readers with titles of Hume-related material which has been published since the November 2004 listing of the bibliography are asked to forward particulars to Jim Fieser, at jfieser@utm.edu.